Conversations with My Daughter There is another Harry Potter book!

Monday July 27th, 2009

T: Dad, you haven't said a word since we left the movie theatre...did you like the movie? Refers to "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince"

Dad: You know – when I like a movie I review it in my mind and keep playing it back in my mind – with this movie, I can't connect a lot of pieces...

T: I'm the opposite! I can't stop thinking about it.

Dad: I guess you liked it.

T: Of course! But, I didn't want Professor Dumbledore to die.

Dad: That's the biggest piece of the puzzle I can't find.

T: Well, Severus Snape never liked him...

Dad: I know that! That's not what I mean... I mean Dumbledore was the most important character in these series. Perhaps, his death marks the end of "Harry Potter" movies.

T: Uh uh! There is another book.

Dad: You're kidding me.

T: I'm serious. "Harry Potter and the Deadly Hallows".

Dad: How? I thought Harry Potter said that without Dumbledore there is no point for him to return. If he is not coming back and with Dumbledore being dead – what's there to see?

T: I'm sure it's as exciting.

Dad: Have you seen this new book - "Harry Potter and the Deadly Hallows"?

T: Yes dad I saw it at the book store.

Dad: It would be interesting to see who takes over Dumbledore's role at the school.

T: Maybe Headmistress Minerva.

Dad: Who? You mean the older woman with the pointy hat?

T: Dad? She is a professor and she is very nice.

Dad: I still don't get it; how did Snape turned into a Half-Blood Prince?

T: Dad, what is your favorite episode?

Dad: I don't believe I have one!

T: You've seen all of them; there must be something that you like about these movies.

Dad: The only thing about "Harry Potter" movies that I like is taking you to watch them.

T: Oh, I thought you enjoyed the movies.

Dad: I Did! When these kids were young – I did not mind watching them swing their batons in their cute outfits saying those funny words. But now...Just taking you to watch the movie is my favorite part of going to the movies. I love going to the movies with you.

T: Why do you watch them with me when I watch them at home?

Dad: Well, I just look at them; I don't really watch them. I just sit and relax while you're watching them. And sometimes I fall asleep!

T: I know that! You even fall asleep watching other movies!

Dad: That's the sign of getting old!

T: No it's the sign of working too much! You're not old dad. You stay up late too much.

Dad: Oh!

T: Dad, how old was I when I saw the first Harry Potter movie?

Dad: The first Harry Potter movie you watched was not the first Harry Potter movie.

T: What?

Dad: "Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban" was the first movie you ever watched in a movie theatre; and it happened to be a "Harry Potter" movie.

T: Oh cool; the third episode...How old was I?

Dad: Three years-old. Actually, you were three years and one month-old.

T: When did I watch “Harry Potter and the Sorcerer’s Stone” and “Harry Potter and Chamber of Secret’s”?

Dad: After watching “the prisoner of Azkaban” you fell in love with the story and we bought the DVD of the first two movies.

T: I can’t wait till the “the Deadly Hallows” comes out.

Dad: This one’s got to be more interesting than the rest of them. With Dumbledore dead and Harry not coming back...

T: Stop it, dad!
